

DR. SEBASTIAN FELIX SCHWEMER, Centre for Information and Innovation Law, University of Copenhagen, DK

Sebastian Schwemer is currently industrial researcher at the Danish Internet Forum (DIFO) and the Centre for Information and Innovation Law (CIIR) at the University of Copenhagen.

Sebastian is primarily interested in studying policy-related questions on technology, especially copyright law, the Digital Single Market and Internet regulation, and is frequently speaking on current technology and society issues. Besides, he is intrigued by legal informatics and entrepreneurial approaches to law by means of automation and artificial intelligence. Sebastian is also one of the initiators of the #CPHFTW grassroots movement, Copenhagen Tech Fest, and Scandinavia's biggest Lean Startup meetup. He worked for leading law firms, advised technology companies and launched several ventures in the digital ecosystem.

Sebastian holds a PhD in law from the University of Copenhagen, as well as degrees in law, economics and management from Copenhagen Business School and the University of Copenhagen (M.Sc.), and in law from Ludwig-Maximilians University (J.D. equivalent).

He is fluent in German, English and Danish, and conversational in Italian and Swedish.

You can follow Sebastian on Twitter @schwemer.